(#1 of a series)

I walk the same way to work each day and found the first card tucked into a fence post outside the entrance to a builders yard. Naturally I took it. It had been there for a while and had some heavy weathering. Much to my surprise the "burning flesh" card appeared in the same place 2 days later. I took that too. This was in much better condition and was obviously an original card judging by the quality paper stock. A few days later "inhospitable hatter" appeared, again in the same place, and was also in good condition. My mysterious card leaver then stopped as his message had obviously been delivered.
