(#3 of a series)

Found next to a paper recycling bank, Lifford Lane recycling depot, Birmingham, UK.

The photo has begun to deteriorate and is covered with scuffs and mud and is most likely the Severn Bridge near Bristol.

When I was out of the UK for some time in the late 90`s a chap who I was working with told me that there had been some very bad storms back home. He had a friend who had driven across this bridge during one of those gales and the bonnet of his car had been suddenly torn off by the wind. He stopped to go and retrieve it and as he opened his car door that too was torn off and lifted over the side of the bridge into the water below.

I imagine that this is a photo by that man, seat belted in, taking photos for his insurance claim.
